

The Odyssey: How Athletics have become Nomads in Major League Baseball

Brien Kocsis 2025

What is this obsession with Athletics? This researcher has featured them in all three of my research papers. They are the only MLB club to have moved to four different cities in their club history. After starting in Philadelphia for 54 seasons, the Athletics were sold to Arnold Johnson, a business owner from Chicago. He moved the Athletics to Kansas City, MO for the 1955 season.

This move lasted for 12 years. Arnold Johnson passed away suddenly in 1960. Charlie O. Finley entered the picture shortly after Arnold's death. He was part of an owner group back in 1954 when the sale of Athletics was going through. Connie Mack's sons Earle and Roy were at odds with each other in the sale. Roy sided with Connie with Earle trying to keep the Athletics in Philadelphia. Charlie was part of a group who was interested in keeping the Athletics in the City of Brotherly Love. However, Johnson received ownership and moved the club to Kansas City. When Johnson passed away, Johnson estate sold the club to O. Finley and after the 1967 season, the Athletics were on the move again. This time to the West Coast in which they settled in Oakland, CA.

Now the club is onto their fourth city. Here is an interesting article from ESPN news:

Oakland Athletics have reached an agreement with Bally's and Gaming & Leisure Properties to build a potential stadium on the Tropicana hotel site along the Las Vegas Strip.

Bally's Corp. made the announcement Monday for a 30,000-seat stadium on the 35-acre site. The project is expected to cost about $1.5 billion, and the A's are asking for nearly $400 million in public support from Nevada Legislature, which could vote on a proposal this week. The A's previously signed an agreement to build a stadium also on Tropicana Avenue but on the other side of Interstate 15 that runs alongside the Strip. They were expected to ask the Legislature for $500 million in public funds for the 49-acre site that would have included much more than a stadium.

The new agreement is a scaled-down proposal, but the location is in closer walking distance for fans who are staying in hotels on the south end of the Strip. "We are thrilled to work alongside Bally's and GLPI and look forward to finalizing plans to bring the Athletics to Southern Nevada."

The agreement between Bally's and the A's for the Tropicana site is "subject to the passing of legislation for public financing" by the Nevada Legislature, which could vote on the nearly $400 million sought by the A's proposal this week.

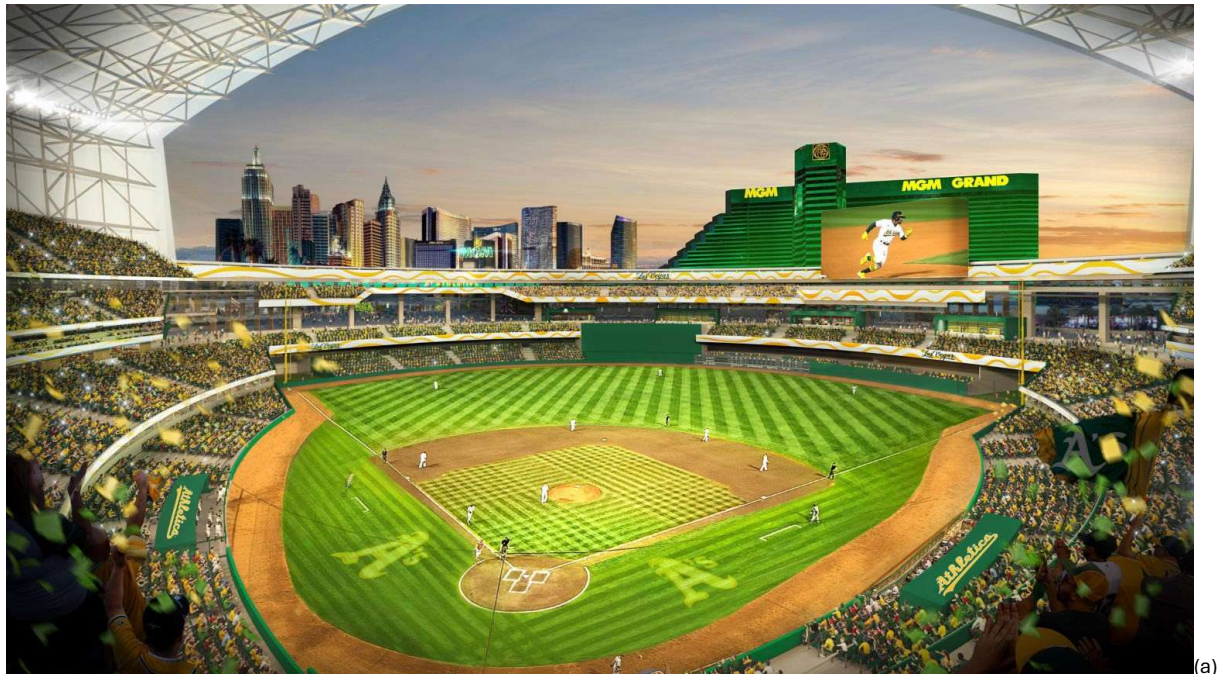

Kaval has said he hopes to break ground on a new ballpark next year and open the venue in time for the 2027 season. The A's have a lease at Oakland Coliseum through 2024, and they could play the 2025 and '26 seasons at Las Vegas Ballpark, home to their Triple-A affiliate Aviators. The Tropicana opened in 1957, and in its heyday drew such A-listers as Sammy Davis Jr. Now the Trop is overshadowed by nearby mega-resorts such as the MGM Grand, New York-New York and Mandalay Bay, and soon it likely will meet the fate of so many other historic Las Vegas hotels that are no longer around.

"We are honored to have been selected to partner with the Oakland Athletics on this monumental step in helping to bring Major League Baseball to the great city of Las Vegas, and to be a part of the once-in-a-generation opportunity of having a professional baseball team located within a short walk of the Las Vegas Strip," Bally's president George Papanier said in a statement. "The Tropicana has been a landmark of Las Vegas for generations, and this development will enhance this iconic site for generations to come." The A's had been looking for a new home for years to replace the outdated and run-down Oakland Coliseum, where the team has played since arriving from Kansas City for the 1968 season. It is averaging less than 9,500 fans at home this season, by far the lowest among the 30 teams.

The team had been in negotiations with the city of Oakland to build a stadium on the waterfront but switched the focus entirely to Las Vegas last month. The A's exclusive negotiating rights deal with the Port of Oakland for the Howard Terminal site expired last Friday, allowing the port to negotiate with other parties interested in using the downtown site. On Friday, the A's also reached a deal with the Culinary Union, a politically powerful Nevada union that represents more than 60,000 workers mostly in the Las Vegas area, which guarantees that A's workers have the right to organize and negotiate union contracts.

"We hope there will be a path forward for all stakeholders so the Las Vegas A's can join the Vegas Golden Knights and the Las Vegas Raiders to continue this transformation as Las Vegas, the entertainment capital of the world, also becomes the sporting capital of the world," Culinary Union secretary-treasurer Ted Pappageorge said in a statement

The Athletics had been working with the city government in trying to procure a new stadium and keeping the Athletics in Oakland. For about 6+ years Athletics and Oakland worked on several proposals for a new stadium. At one point, the Athletics had plans for a new waterfront Stadium, but neither side could agree on terms of financial backing and the deal went south. So, after 56 years calling Oakland home, the Athletics are going to call Las Vegas their new home.

Athletics history in the World Series

What if an interleague series opened at Citizens Bank Park pitting the Oakland Phillies against the Philadelphia Athletics? What if it had been Connie Mack's team, not R.R.M? "Bob" Carpenter's that caught fire after World War II and captivated a city? What if the increasingly impossible economics of two-team baseball cities had forced the Phillies to flee to Milwaukee, Baltimore or Minneapolis instead of the Athletics to Kansas City after 1954?

Any Rip Van Winkle-type Philadelphia observer who fell asleep in 1945 and woke in 1955 in a one-team baseball city would surely have thought the survivor would have been Mr. Mack's White Elephants. After all, the Phils, having wandered through the city for decades playing in substandard parks, were the Athletics tenants at Shibe Park, one of the palaces of sport. The Athletics handily outdrew the Phillies. And while Mack's teams often were dreadful, he never suffered a run like the Phils did between 1918 and 1948 when they managed one winning season (78-76 in 1932) and finished last, or second to last every season from 1933 to 1945.

The Athletics won eight American League pennants and five World Series between 1903 and 1945, second only to the mighty New York Yankees in that stretch. The Phillies managed one National League pennant (1915) and no world championships. The players made history. Before 1945, the Athletics' galaxy of stars included Lefty Grove, Al Simmons, Eddie Collins, Mickey Cochrane, Jimmy Foxx, Rube Waddell, Frank "Home Run" Baker, Herb Pennock, Jimmy Dykes, Nap Lajoie, Eddie Plank, Chief Bender and for 2 1/2 seasons each, respectively, Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, Hall of Famers all but Dykes.

And, of course, the A's had beloved Connie Mack, one of the founders of modern game and the team's manager for 50 years.

So, what if? Imagine if Mack's sons, who were running the team by 1952, could have added a few more standouts to go with Shantz, Ferris Fain and Gus Zernial and packed Shibe Park (renamed for Mr. Mack in 1953) as they challenged the mighty Yankees? What if Carpenter hadn't assembled the Whiz Kids and, under pressure from the A's success, looked for greener pastures as the Boston Braves and St. Louis Browns did?

Imagine the A's becoming the Yankees' great rival in the 1950s and 1960s. Imagine the AL being dominated by four great East Coast cities during the 1970s and 1980s. Think of the late September showdown series with Earl Weaver's Orioles or Reggie Jackson's Yankees or Carlton Fisk's Red Sox.

You can almost hear Mack chuckling how could it have been otherwise? In South Philadelphia it will be otherwise, of course, the Athletics hailing from their third home city while the Phillies are now one of the sport's showcase franchises, but it could very well have been reversed.

ERAs in the Athletics history:

The Glory Years

Right from the beginning when the franchise was established in Philadelphia, Connie Mack started building his team to compete for titles. 1902, they finished first for the 2nd season of the American League. There was no World Series, but it set the tone of what was to become a regular happening in the new league. They finished first in 1905 and met the NY Giants in the Fall Classic. Even though they lost 4 games to 1 to the powerful Giants, Connie Mack's Athletics set the stage for Fall Classic for the next nine seasons. The Athletics finished 4th, 2nd, 6th and then from 1909-1914 the Athletics finished no worse than 4th and were World Series champions in 1910-1911-1913 and fell to the 'Miracle Braves' in the Fall Classic of 1914.

Connie Mack established his '$100,000.00' infield with Harry Davis (1B), Eddie Collins (2B), Home Run Baker (3B) and Jack Barry at (SS). From 1909-1911 and 1912-1914 (Stuffy McInnis replaced Harry Davis at 1B in 1912) this infield was the nucleus of the great Athletic nines. After the 1914 World Series lost, Connie dismantled the club. He rid himself of the '100,00.00' infield, sold his rotation off and dwelled at the bottom of the AL for nine seasons. Here is where Connie Mack's stars ended up after the 1914 season:

Pitching:

1.) Chief Bender -

- a. went over to the Federal League in 1915 and played for the Baltimore club
- b. came back to Philadelphia in 1916-17 and played for the Phillies
- c. ended his career in 1925 with the White Sox's

d. Selected to the HOF - 1953

2.) Eddie Plank -

- a. Pitched in the Federal League for ST. Louis - 1915
- b. Finished his career in 1916-17 with STL Browns

c. Selected to the HOF – 1946

$100,00.00 Infield:

Eddie Collins - 2B: traded to Chicago White Sox in 1915

ended his career with Athletics from 1927-30

Selected to the HOF - 1939

Jack Berry - SS: traded to BOS A 1915 - ended his career with them from 1915-19

Home Run' Baker – 3B: did not play in 1915 - resurfaced with NYY 1916-22 ended his career with them. Selected to the HOF - 1955

Stuffy McGinnis - 1B: stayed with Athletics up to 1917 - traded to BOS A - ended his career with the Phillies in 1927

This researcher believes if the Athletics would have won the 1914 Series, they would have gone on to dominate baseball just like the Yankees started doing after 1920. Connie Mack would have bought Babe Ruth and today we would be talking about the great Athletics teams and their 30 plus WS titles. There is no doubt that would have happened. Connie would have had the money to do it, but instead the Athletics plummeted to the bottom of the league (they had resurgent to the top from 1924-1934) and were finally sold off in 1954, moved to Kansas City and eventually to Oakland, CA. You must wonder what could have happened.....

The Dark Years

In 1914, the Athletics lost the World Series to the "Miracle Braves" in a four-game sweep. Mack traded, sold or released most of the team's star players soon after. In his book To Everything a Season, Bruce Kuklick points out that there were suspicions that the A's had thrown the Series, or at least "laid down", perhaps in protest of Mack's frugal ways. Mack himself alluded to that rumor years later, but debunked it, asserting that factions within the team along with the allure of a third major league, the Federal League had distracted the team.

The Federal League had been formed to begin play in 1914. As the A.L. had done 13 years before, the new league raided existing A.L. and N.L. teams for players. Several of his best players, including Bender, had already decided to jump before the World Series. Mack refused to match the offers of the F.L. teams, preferring to rebuild with younger (and less expensive) players. The result was a swift and near-total collapse. The Athletics went from a 99–53 (.651) record and a pennant in 1914 to a record of 43–109 (.283) and last place in 1915, and then to 36–117 (.235, still a modern major-league low) in 1916. The team would finish in last place every year through 1922 and would not contend again until 1925. Shibe died in 1922, and his sons Tom and John took over the business side, leaving the baseball side to Mack. By this time Mack had cemented his famous image of the tall, gaunt and well-dressed man (he never wore a uniform during his managerial career, preferring a business suit, tie and skimmer) waving his players into position with a scorecard.

2nd Dynasty

After the 1923 season, Connie Mack began to build another winner. In 1927 and 1928, the Athletics finished second to the New York Yankees, then won pennants in 1929, 1930 and 1931, winning the World Series in 1929 and 1930. In each of the three years, the A's won over 100 games.

As it turned out, this would be the Athletics' last hurrah in Philadelphia. Connie Mack again sold or traded his best players to reduce expenses. The Great Depression was well under way, and declining attendance had drastically reduced the team's revenues. The construction of a spite fence at Shibe Park, blocking the view from nearby buildings, only served to irritate potential paying fans. However, the consequences did not become apparent for a few more years, as the team finished second in 1932 and third in 1933.

Ty Cobb played for the Athletics in 1927-1928 after playing for the Detroit Tigers for the Detroit Tigers. Connie Mack convinced Ty to join his Athletics team after pitching him that he assembled a great team with an excellent chance to go to the World Series. Ty held on to the dream of winning a World Series (Cobb went to WS in 1907-1909 never winning) his only thing left to put on his mantle. Unfortunately, the '27- 28 Yankees won the World Series. Ty Cobb retired following the 1928 season.

Un-notice

The Athletics finished fifth in 1934, then last in 1935. Mack was already 68 years old when the A's won the pennant in 1931, and many felt that the game had long since passed him by. Although he had every intention of building another winner, he did not have the extra money to get big stars. Unlike most other owners, Mack had no source of income aside from the A's, so the dwindling attendance figures of the early 1930s hit him especially hard.

As a result, the A's went into a decline that lasted for over 30 years, through three cities. Except for a fifth-place finish in 1944, they finished in last or next-to-last place every year from 1935 to 1946. In 1936, Tom Shibe died, and John succeeded him as club president. However, John resigned due to illness a few months later, leaving the presidency to Mack. When John died on July 11, 1937, Mack bought enough shares from the Shibe estate to become majority owner. However, Mack had been the franchise's number one man for some time before then. Long after most other teams had hired a general manager, he continued to exercise complete control over baseball matters, making personnel decisions as well as leading the team on the field.

By the mid-1940s, Mack was showing signs of mental deterioration. He would call on players from decades earlier to pinch-hit, lapse into sudden outbursts of temper, or make strange calls that the team would often just ignore. He spent most games asleep in the dugout rather than playing any active part, leaving his coaches to run the team most of the time. Nonetheless, despite calls inside and outside the organization to step down, Mack would not even consider firing himself. Also, during this time, Mack gave a minority stake in the team to his sons, Roy, Earle and Connie, Jr. Although Connie, Jr. was several years younger than Roy and Earle (he was the son of Connie, Sr.'s second marriage), Mack intended to have all three of them inherit the team upon his death. He also intended for Earle, who had been assistant manager since 1924, to succeed him as manager. This decision would have dire consequences for A's later.

I did not list all 33 seasons of rosters in this section. The following years are listed:

1935-44-47-48-49-50-52-55-62-1967. These years are significant to how the As finished. For the 33 seasons (1935-1967) the A's finished 7th or last for 26 of them.

The exception was 1944/T-5 - 1947-49 they finished 5-4-5 - 1950 was Connie's 50th Anniversary team (F-Last) - 1955/1st year in KC - 1962/Charlie O Finley bought the team 1967/last year in KC before moving to Oakland

Regular Season Rosters: 1935, 1944, 1947-50, 1955, 1962, 1967

Pre-cursor to the Oakland Years

By the summer of 1954, it was obvious that the A's were on an irreversible slide into bankruptcy. Earle and Roy decided that there was no choice but to sell their father's beloved team, and it was with great sorrow that the old man gave his approval for the sale. Although several offers were put forward by Philadelphia interests, American League president Will Harridge was convinced that the team could never be viable in Philadelphia. The sparse crowds at Shibe had been a source of frustration for some time to the other AL owners, as they could not even begin to meet their expenses for trips to Philadelphia. As a result, Harridge had come to believe that the only way to resolve the "Philadelphia problem" was to move the Athletics elsewhere.

For this reason, when Chicago businessman Arnold Johnson offered to buy the team, the other owners pressured Roy Mack to agree to the sale. Johnson had very close ties to the Yankees; he not only owned Yankee Stadium but also owned Blues Stadium in Kansas City, home to the Yankees' top farm team. Johnson intended to move the A's to a renovated Blues Stadium if he was clear to buy them. The Yankees made no secret that they favored Johnson, and their backing gave him the upper hand with the other owners. After an October 12 owners meeting at which several offers from Philadelphia interests were rejected as inadequate (Harridge later said that while several of them "talked about millions," they didn't have any money behind them), Mack agreed in principle to sell the A's to Johnson no later than October 18.[4]

However, on October 17, Roy Mack suddenly announced that the A's had been sold to a Philadelphia-based group headed by auto dealer John Crisconi. The deal was to be approved at an American League owners' meeting on October 28. It looked headed for approval when rumors (reportedly planted by the Yankees) cropped up that the Crisconi group was underfinanced, and Johnson collared Roy Mack at Roy's home to persuade him that his original deal was better in the long run. On October 28, the sale to the Crisconi group came up one vote short of the five needed for approval, with Roy Mack voting against the deal he'd just negotiated. A day later, Connie Mack released an open letter to A's fans (one that was likely written by his wife) blasting the owners for sinking the deal to the Crisconi group.

However, he conceded that he didn't have enough money to run the A's in 1955, and the Johnson deal was the only one that had any prospect of winning approval. A few days later, the Macks sold the A's to Johnson for $3.5 million--$1.5 million for their shares plus $2 million in debt. Selling Shibe Park--which had been renamed Connie Mack Stadium a year earlier--proved more difficult, but the Phillies reluctantly bought it. The American League owners met again on November 8 and duly approved the sale of the A's from Mack to Johnson. Getting the three-fourths majority required to move the team to Kansas City proved more difficult, but Detroit owner Spike Briggs was persuaded to change his vote, ending the A's 54-year stay in Philadelphia.[5] his stars. The Athletics were the best in baseball for the first 15 years of the American League existence champions in 1902-1905-1910-1911-1913. They were a dominant team in 1914 (99 wins), so losing to the Reds in a four-game sweep was a bit overwhelming to comprehend. In a modern-day analysis, the A's loss is equivalent to a 16 seed team in NCAA Basketball Tournament beating a 1 seed, it doesn't happen. After the 1931 Series, Connie Mack paired his team down. Selling off the stars and settling into the bottom of the league for the next 33 seasons. Connie never recovered and in 1954 they were sold, and the odyssey began. From Kansas City to Oakland and now in Sacramento and again in 2028 to Las Vegas, these Athletics once the pride of Philadelphia will begin a new chapter on the strip in Las Vegas.

Will they repeat history when they moved from KC to Oakland (in 4 short years – 1968-1972) the Athletics' Charlie Finley assembled a most dominating team that took control of the World Series and smashed the Reds, Mets and Dodgers for 3 straight wins or will they continue toil at the bottom of the AL WEST division, only time will tell for this Odyssey.....
